Summary

Adjunt Professor in the Department of Statistics at the Centre of Natural and Exact Sciences of the Federal University of Pernambuco (CCEN/UFPE), located in the city of Recife, PE, Brazil. President of the Brazilian Society for Applied and Computational Mathematics (SBMAC). His current research activity can be divided into three broad lines. The main part is focused in using interacting particle systems, percolation models and special stochastic processes on graphs to describe the spread of an information and other similar phenomena on a population. Also, he is interested in studying (asymptotical) properties of random structures inspired by biological questions, and related subjects of discrete mathematics. This includes some percolation and random graph models. Finally, and more recently, he started to get involved in studying new algebraic structures called evolution algebras. His interest in the subject is, between other things, because of a nice interplay between the concept of evolution algebras and some notions related to discrete-time Markov chains.
